ABSTRACT

The resources contained in this guide represent a comprehensive list of organizations that have an interest in or knowledge about underage drinking issues. The list begins with the individuals and organizations involved in the National Association of Governors' Highway Safety Representatives (NAGHSR) Underage Drinking Project, including the names and contact information for the original five pilot sites and the six communities that participated in the rapid response team model. Following this contact information is a list of national organizations. When possible, the address, phone, fax, e-mail and web site information is provided along with a brief description of the organization. This should assist organizations and coalitions working in the underage drinking field in identifying appropriate resources for further information. In addition, this resource guide provides a list of contacts for each of the Governors' Highway Safety offices and the state contact information for the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention's (OJJDP) Enforcing Underage Drinking Laws program. Community How To Guide On...RESOURCES
EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Cities, counties, and neighborhoods across America are confronting the problem of underage drinking and its consequences. The National Association of Governors' Highway Safety Representatives (NAGHSR) is a professional organization representing the chief highway safety officers from each state, the District of Columbia, and the U.S. territories. NAGHSR is committed to prevent and reduce illegal underage alcohol consumption and to curb the terrible toll underage drinking takes on our society.

As a result of their commitment to underage drinking issues and to assist cities, counties, and neighborhoods, NAGHSR, with financial assistance from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), developed a series of "Community How To Guides." These "Community How To Guides" address fundamental components of planning and implementing a comprehensive underage drinking prevention program. The Guides are designed to be brief, easy-to-read, and easy-to-use. Each guide contains a resource section to assist readers in obtaining additional and detailed information about the topics covered in that guide. The appendices include useful tools for each topic area that provide coalitions and organizations a jump-start in their planning and implementation activities.

Topics covered in the "Community How To Guides" include:

- Coalition Building
- Needs Assessment and Strategic Planning
- Evaluation
- Prevention and Education
- Underage Drinking Enforcement
- Public Policy Advocacy
- Media Relations
- Self-Sufficiency
- Resources

In addition to the "Community How To Guides," NAGHSR also developed a Case Study of a model community underage drinking prevention program. This study is designed to give other communities which are considering starting an underage drinking prevention program or those that have an existing effort, some practical, real-world ideas and suggestions. The comprehensive approach, set forth in the "how to guides," has been applied in this community to great success.

The impetus for developing these guides came from the work NAGHSR has done in the area of underage drinking prevention for NHTSA and the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (OJJDP). Based on their work in the underage drinking prevention arena, NAGHSR felt the comprehensive approach, first piloted in the Washington, D.C. area, could be of benefit to any community seeking to reduce underage drinking.

Community How To Guide On...RESOURCES EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Although these guides are targeted at the underage drinking issue, the basic process and information can be applied by any community-based organization striving to affect a social problem through changing community norms. These guides will also prove useful to Safe Communities, Students Against Destructive Decisions (SADD) chapters, Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) organizations, police departments, and youth groups belonging to the National Organizations for Youth Safety (NOYS).

Violence prevention organizations may also find the information and tools helpful since the process to reduce incidents of youth violence is the same process detailed in these guides.

Contrary to conventional wisdom, underage drinking is not inevitable. It is preventable. These "Community How To Guides" are designed to help individuals or organizations to craft programs that will help the young people in their communities remain alcohol-free.

Community How To Guide On...RESOURCES ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The production of the nine "Community How To Guides" on underage drinking prevention involved the efforts of a number of people who helped develop the ideas and suggestions for each publication and provided the time to review the draft materials.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) wishes to thank Barbara Harsha, Executive Director, National Association of Governors' Highway Safety Representatives (NAGHSR) for her leadership in the development of the "Community How To Guides" and to Pam Beer of PMB Communications and Trina Leonard of Leonard Communications, the authors of the Guides. Special thanks to Nancy Rea, Executive Director of Drawing the Line on Underage Alcohol Use in Montgomery County, Maryland for her expertise and review.

The mission of Project Extra Mile is "To create a community consensus that clearly states that underage alcohol use is illegal, unhealthy, and unacceptable." To accomplish this mission, the project organized a community coalition with representation from public and private schools, law enforcement, the hospitality industry, prevention and safety groups, youth, health agencies and organizations, child advocacy groups, employee assistance programs, the faith community, prosecutors, emergency nurses, the media, and others. A nine-month needs assessment process, that was undertaken in 1996, continues to drive the coalition's strategic plan which includes a variety of activities and programs including testimony to the state legislature, compliance checks of businesses licensed to sell alcohol, media advocacy, and training of high school students. The group also works with law enforcement, school administrators, parents, coaches and others to insure a clear, no-use message is communicated to underage youth. In 1999, the organization was honored by the National Commission Against Drunk Driving (NCADD) with their Community Award.

The Safe And Sober Youth (SASY) program works to provide parents of Central Virginia with the tools they need to help teens avoid at-risk behavior. The focus of the program is to fight substance abuse, teen crime, and impaired driving. Through the Virginia License Presentation Program, SASY is able to provide every new teen driver household in Chesterfield and Powhatan counties with educational safe driving information. One

The Save Our Youth Coalition, initially formed to operate in the Salt Lake County area, has broadened to a statewide program. Several of projects the coalition has conducted include a statewide Cops-In-Shops program with 30 cooperating local law enforcement agencies, compliance checks, school-based information programs, public information, and store clerk training. A recreation-area patrol program has made an impact for the past several summers in the canyons surrounding Salt Lake City and statewide training and implementation of youth/peer courts, which include alcohol or alcohol-related offenses, also shows success. All eleven college campuses in the state have alcohol prevention programs and peer leadership and improvisational theater training is also conducted at the high school and junior high school level.

The Travis County Underage Drinking Prevention Program (UDPP) receives federal funds from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration through a grant administered by the Texas Department of Transportation. The UDPP conducts anti-DWI/alcohol awareness public education programs for Travis County schools, participates in community events and health fairs and hosts Underage Drinking Prevention Task Force meetings on a regular basis. The UDPP has also identified the link between underage drinking and more visible social issues besides drinking and driving, such as binge drinking, teen pregnancy, fetal alcohol syndrome, unplanned/unwanted sexual encounters and alcohol poisoning. UDDP has highlighted those issues to the Travis County community to underscore the importance of reducing underage drinking. The program has also formed partnerships with a variety of county agencies in order to make a significant contribution in saving the lives of teenagers by discouraging their use of alcohol.

Coalition for a Drug-Free Tippecanoe County
P.O. Box 6223
Lafayette, IN 47903
765-471-9916
E-mail: drugfree@dcwi.com

The Task Force on Underage Drinking's (TFUD) mission statement is to reduce underage drinking in Tippecanoe County by developing, implementing, and evaluating a comprehensive plan and providing community-wide leadership initiatives in the areas of public policy, community involvement, law enforcement, treatment, education, and prevention. So far, TFUD has sponsored a community issue forum where parents, students, and concerned citizens gathered to talk about underage drinking, and an issues forum at Purdue University addressing the issue of underage and high risk drinking on campus. The Law Enforcement and Public Policy Committee met with local owners and managers of businesses that sell alcoholic beverages, and worked with Indiana Coalition to Reduce Underage Drinking on legislation to provide voluntary alcoholic beverage server training. The Education Committee is working to gain approval for a survey in the county's high schools.

Lenoir County Initiative to Reduce Underage Drinking

Fax: 252-527-1914

The executive director of the Chamber of Commerce is the father of two teenage girls and became concerned about the underage drinking problem in the county. As a result, he formed the Lenoir County Initiative to Reduce Underage Drinking. One of the problems in the community is a perception among young people that no one cares if they drink. Parents often sponsor underage drinking parties and there is little fear of being caught for underage drinking offenses. To increase awareness of the problem, the group organized media coverage of the NAGHSR Rapid Response team visit and is working with a local television station to sponsor a public education effort. Law enforcement agencies and the state alcohol beverage control also worked to overcome a problem that prevented the agencies from communicating with one another during underage drinking enforcement efforts. In addition, the group was successful in obtaining funding to conduct a survey of admissions at the local emergency room to further highlight the seriousness of underage drinking in the community.

Fax: 301-731-7318

The Prince George's County Highway Safety Program initially targeted the area of the county in and around the University of Maryland, the largest university campus in the state for their underage drinking prevention effort. A diverse group of organizations in the community representing law enforcement, secondary education, colleges and universities, board of license commissioners, substance abuse prevention, health department, and public officials came together to develop a comprehensive plan. One of the suggestions was to provide more support for students on campus who do not drink and publicize a survey about "No Drinking" choices as a socially acceptable norm. The group will also be working to remove alcohol advertising from the university's school newspaper and will distribute copies of "Things to do Without Alcohol" that is published by the university's health center.

Rio Arriba DWI Prevention Program

Fax: 505-753-6557

The Rio Arriba County DWI Prevention Program in New Mexico is a local task force formed in 1994 to coordinate anti-drinking and driving activities. Because alcohol use among teens is high in the county, the organization applied for assistance in establishing a comprehensive underage drinking prevention program. One of the goals of the comprehensive program was to establish greater coordination among the various state and local law enforcement agencies, which has been accomplished through several successful enforcement initiatives. The group has also targeted retailers in the community that have a record of sales to minors and organized a successful effort to remove a prominent billboard advertising alcohol.

Take Charge Coalition

E-mail: murphyj@co.oswego.ny.us

The Take Charge Coalition, Inc., is a not-for-profit substance abuse coalition that was formed in 1995 in response to an alcohol-related death of a local high school student. The mission of Take Charge is to empower the community to prevent alcohol and other substance abuse and to promote a community norm which supports holistic health and well being. The group works to accomplish this mission by promoting healthy alternatives, zero tolerance of illegal underage drinking, and education and awareness of situations and consequences related to alcohol and other drugs. The coalition has broad representation from service providers, business, law enforcement, parents, education, and the media. When the group was formed, it hosted a two-day "community exchange", which brought together stakeholders from throughout the community to address adolescent alcohol and other substance use. Since that time, the coalition has sponsored several community education programs, worked with the county school district to provide alcohol/drug free messages to parents, worked with tavern and off premise business owners on adolescent access to alcohol, and sponsored several alcohol/drug free activities through its Positive Alternatives Committee.

Youth Alcohol-Free Alliance of Hermantown (YAFA)
c/o Hermantown Community Schools
4307 Ugstad Road
Hermantown, MN 55811
218-729-9313

The Hermantown school system formed a Learners at Risk committee several years ago, which formed the basis for the Youth Alcohol-Free Alliance of Hermantown. The group decided to apply for assistance in forming this underage drinking prevention effort after an incident at a local lake that involved reports of underage drinking and sexual assault. Denial is a major issue in the community, which some members attribute to the tradition of stoicism and handling problems "within the family." So far the group has developed a mission statement, worked with other school systems in the area to develop a joint effort to combat underage drinking, and had representatives appear on a local public television station.

The Safe and Drug-Free Schools Program is the Federal government's primary vehicle for reducing drug, alcohol and tobacco use, and violence, through education and prevention activities in the nation's schools. The program supports initiatives to meet the seventh National Education Goal, which states that by the year 2000 all schools will be free of drugs and violence and the unauthorized presence of firearms and alcohol, and offer a disciplined environment conducive to learning. These initiatives are designed to prevent violence in and around schools, and strengthen programs that prevent the illegal use of alcohol, tobacco, and drugs, involve parents, and are coordinated with related Federal, State and community efforts and resources.

The Division oversees the Youth Risk Behavior Surveillance System (YRBSS) and the School Health Policies & Programs Study which provide information on the prevalence and trends in health risk behaviors among U.S. high school students and to provide information on school health policies and programs addressing the prevention of health risk behaviors.

The YRBSS includes a nationally representative survey of high school students which is conducted every other year. The survey includes questions on driving and riding in a car with a driver who has been drinking and questions about alcohol use and binge drinking. Many states and large cities also use the YRBS and information on these same questions is available for them. The School Health Policies and Programs Study was first conducted in 1994 and repeated in 2000. It contains information on school health policies and programs related to alcohol use and possession. It also contains information on district and state level policies and on what is taught in the classroom on impaired driving and alcohol use. Year 2000 data will be available in Fall 2001.

NHTSA is responsible for reducing deaths, injuries and economic losses resulting from motor vehicle crashes. This is accomplished by setting and enforcing safety performance standards for motor vehicles and motor vehicle equipment, and through grants to state and local governments to enable them to conduct effective local highway safety programs. The mission of the Impaired Driving Division is to develop partnerships to cooperatively save lives, prevent injuries, and reduce traffic-related health care and economic costs resulting from impaired driving (alcohol and other drugs). The goal is to reduce alcohol-related fatalities to no more than 11,000 by 2005. To accomplish the mission, the Division conducts a number of programs and activities targeted at youth including the following:

- A three-year $1 million grant to five states to demonstrate the effectiveness of highly visible enforcement initiatives on a weekly basis.
- The "You Drink & Drive. You Lose." comprehensive impaired driving prevention campaign targeted at high-risk populations such as 21- to 34-year-olds, high blood alcohol and repeat offenders, and underage drinkers.
- Support for The National Organizations for Youth Safety (NOYS), a group of over 30 national organizations that are either youth serving groups or organizations with a major youth focus.
- A college binge drinking prevention initiative with fraternities and sororities.
- A comprehensive national public education and information campaign in partnership with Black Entertainment Television (BET) that focuses on underage drinking, impaired driving and low safety belt usage rates in the teen population.
- A zero tolerance initiative in five states that is conducted by college and high school students in partnership with local police.
- A youth traffic safety training program based on the Traffic Safety Box, a CD-Rom based program that provides the student with an opportunity to interact and learn about highway safety through a series of interactive exercises.
- Support for the MADD National Youth Summit to Prevent Underage Drinking and six state-level youth summits.
- A juvenile holdover project that will identify innovative programs, provide guidelines for replication and training to interested communities.

The American Academy of Pediatrics is an organization of 55,000 primary care pediatricians, pediatric medical specialists, and pediatric surgical specialists dedicated to the health, safety, and well being of infants, children, adolescents and young adults. The AAP has developed guidelines on alcohol prevention and service that encourage all providers of adolescent health care to discuss the hazards of alcohol and other drug use with their patients as a routine part of risk behavior assessment, to take the opportunity to reinforce non-use behaviors and assess current use with a nonjudgmental approach. The organization also recommends that special attention be paid to the discussion of this issue when risk factors for problem drinking, such as a family history of alcoholism, are present. In addition, AAP encourages pediatricians to assist families, churches, community agencies, and school personnel in developing alcohol education programs and alcohol-free activities.

The Harvard School of Public Health College Alcohol Study (CAS) is an ongoing survey of 15,000 students at 140 four-year colleges in 40 states. It was the first study to use the term "binge drinking" to describe the pattern of heavy episodic alcohol use that is characteristic of many college students. It was also the first to identify the "second-hand effects" of binge drinking— those problems suffered by other, non-binging students. The study examines important issues in college alcohol abuse, including the role of fraternities and sororities and of athletics, the special situation of freshmen, the influence of student drinking norms on behavior, and the role that availability and price play. The College Alcohol Study has now surveyed different random samples of students at the same four-year colleges three times: in 1993, 1997, and in 1999.

National Organizations for Youth Safety (NOYS)
Web site: http://www.noys.com

Since its inaugural meeting in 1994, The National Organizations for Youth Safety, (NOYS) has grown to over 40 national, youth-serving organizations. NOYS members meet a minimum of three times a year bringing many youth safety and prevention organizations to one table in order to discuss common issues. Through this dialogue many of the NOYS member organizations have collaborated on the development and delivery of national, NOYS-sponsored programs and projects. NOYS has given young people from different organizations an opportunity to meet their peers who are working on similar issues. Young people from the member organizations have been speakers and presenters at the conferences of a number of their fellow NOYS organizations. Federal agencies are interested in the NOYS members because it is a one-stop place to deliver a message to many. Just a few of the organizations that belong to NOYS include BACCHUS/Gamma, AAA, NHTSA, EnCARE, Future Homemakers of America, SADD, MADD and the National Association of Student Councils.

Founded in 1977, PRIDE (Parents' Resource Institute for Drug Education), is the largest and oldest organization in the nation devoted to drug- and violence-free youth. Major PRIDE programs include the PRIDE Survey (student drug, tobacco and alcohol use and violence questionnaires), the Annual PRIDE World Drug Conference and the PRIDE Youth training programs (America's PRIDE, Club PRIDE and PRIDE Pals). Since 1982 PRIDE Surveys have been used by over 6400 school systems. The surveys are a used a measure of effectiveness of the White House drug strategy and required for organizations receiving Department of Education funding.

Web site: http://www.hospitalityweb.org

The purpose of the National Hospital Resource Network (NHRN) is to inform and advise interested parties how to form cooperative and collaborative alliances to promote responsible hospitality principles and practices. The goals of the organization are: (1) Better relationships and improved communication among various public, private and government agencies and associations involved directly or indirectly with the hospitality industry. (2) A commitment by key state and community stakeholders to develop inclusive, cooperative, and collaborative partnerships for responsible hospitality. (3) Reduction in harm caused by high-risk practices of hospitality and retail licensed beverage businesses. (4) Improved public image of the hospitality and retail beverage industries and general development and enhancement of the professionalism of management and staff.

Social Development Research Group (SDRG)

Seattle, WA 98115-2024
206-685-1997
Fax: 206-543-4507
Web site: http://www.washington.edu/sdrg

SDRG's research focuses on the prevention and treatment of health and behavior problems among young people. Drug abuse, delinquency, risky sexual behavior, violence, and school dropout are among the problems addressed. J. David Hawkins, director, and Richard F. Catalano, associate director, began in 1979 to develop the Social Development Strategy, which provides the theoretical basis for risk- and protective-focused prevention that underlies much of the group's research.
